

Youth Sleep & Nighttime Mental Reset Guide

Write your thoughts, pause, or talk to a trusted adult whenever you feel ready.

Calming a busy mind when bedtime feels restless

WHAT IT FEELS LIKE

Late-night overthinking happens when external distractions fade and stored worries surface. Creating an intentional evening wind-down protects both your mood and cognition.

GROUNDING RESET

Nighttime Brain-Dump Technique

Keep a pad beside your bed. Write down every nagging thought or tomorrow-task for 3 uninterrupted minutes. Tell yourself: 'These thoughts are safe on paper; I will revisit them tomorrow after I rest.'

Take 3 slow breaths. You do not need to rush or figure everything out at once.
