

IDENTITY STRESS

Trying to figure out who you are while the world has so many ideas about who you should be.

It's normal to feel pulled in different directions. You are still becoming.

This can look like...

Feeling pressure to have it all figured out.

Changing yourself to fit in.

Comparing your behind-the-scenes with other people's highlights.

Not feeling like you belong anywhere.

Unsure about what you really want.

Wondering if the real you is enough.

So many directions...

Take a moment to reflect

“Who am I when nobody is telling me who to be?”

You're allowed to change while you figure yourself out.

Parts of Me

What different parts of me matter to me?

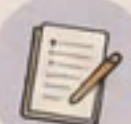

Small steps you can try

Explore one small thing that sparks your curiosity.

Ask people you trust what they see in you.

Try new things without needing to be perfect at them.

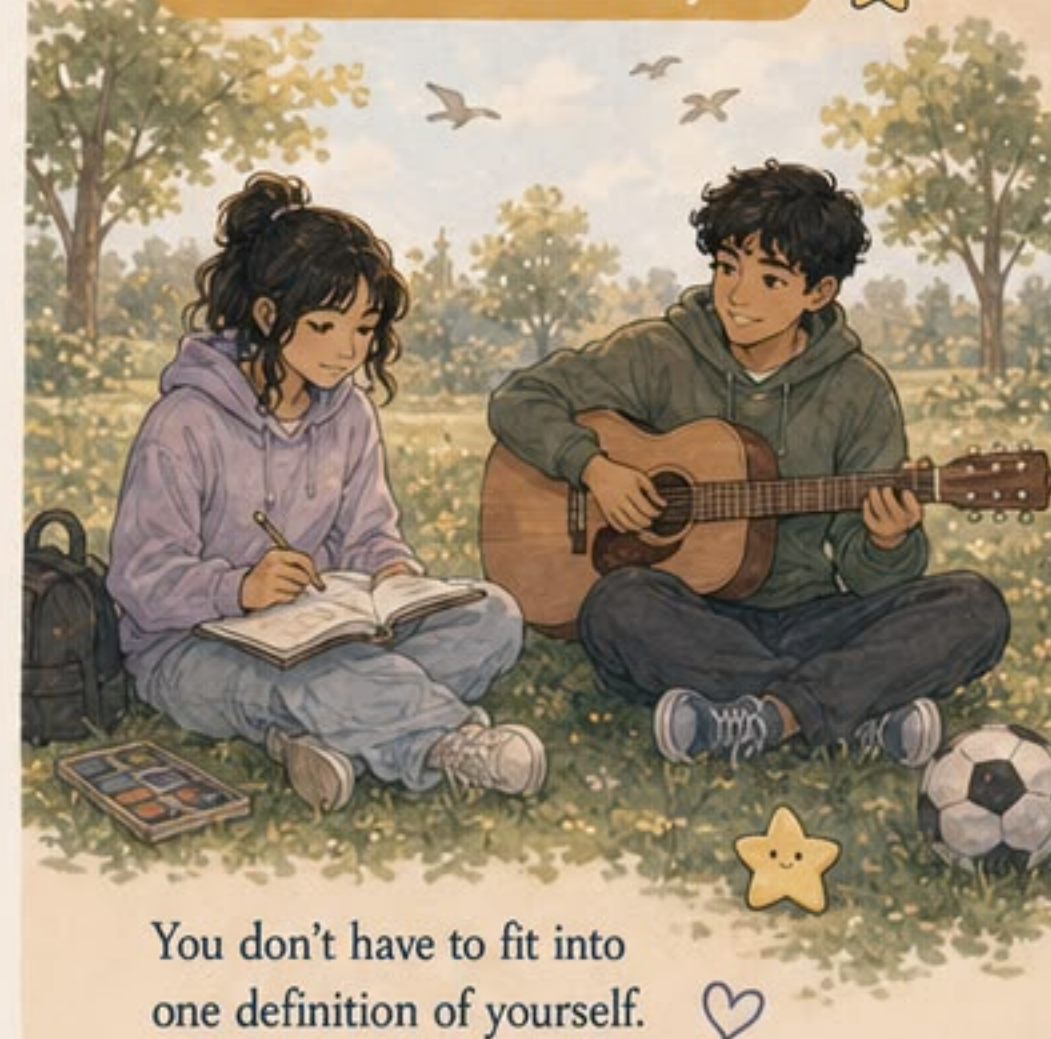

Give yourself permission to grow at your own pace.

Focus on who you are becoming, not who you “should” be.

You are allowed to be you

You don't have to fit into one definition of yourself.